NICOLAS DEUSON, Guitar

A semifinalist in the 2009 Tokyo International Guitar Competition, 1st Prize Winner of the Pacific Guitar Festival, and prize winner in numerous other competitions, Dr. Nicolas Deuson is enjoying a burgeoning concert career both as a solo performer and chamber musician.

Nicolas Deuson attended The University of Georgia on scholarship as an undergraduate, studying with John Sutherland, attended The Cleveland Institute of Music as a masters student of Jason Vieaux, and studied with Scott Tennant at The University of Southern California, obtaining his doctorate in 2009. He has also studied with such artists as Pepe Romero, Manuel Barrueco, and David Russell. Mr. Deuson received the Michael and Amelia Alban Award in Guitar in 2005.

Aside from his duties as a performer, Dr. Deuson is dedicated to the art of teaching, serving on the faculty of CSU Channel Islands and teaching at his atelier in Los Angeles, CA.

The guitar he performs on was made by Olivier Fanton d'Andon, 2006. The carbon produced by Nic's transport to this concert was offset by a donation to www.ClimateCare.org.
